We use the UXtweak service in order to better understand the needs of our users and to optimise our services and the overall user experience with them. UXtweak uses cookies and other technologies to collect data about the behaviour of our users and about their devices (in particular the IP addresses of devices (collected and stored in an anonymised form), the device screen resolution, the device type, information about the browser used, geographic location (country), preferred language).

UXtweak stores this information in a pseudonymised user profile. Neither we nor UXtweak will ever use this information to identify individual users or to associate them with other user data unless you provide your consent to this. You can find more details in the UXtweak Personal Data Protection Rules.

By clicking this opt-out link you will be redirected to a website where you can stop any collection of data about your use of our website by UXtweak and the use of cookies by UXtweak on other websites.

NOTE: We advise that the provided wording is generic and may need to be adapted to your specific use of the UXtweak Service. We recommend you work together with your legal advisor to ensure that this clause addresses all the concerns related to your business.
